

Alonso Mateo Gómez holds a PhD in Psychology by the Castilla La Mancha University, a Master degree in Education by the Spanish Distance University, speciality of school counseling, a Primary School Teacher Degree at Castilla-la Mancha University, Specializing in English and Therapeutic Education, C1 in English, C1 in German, Master in Developmental Psychology and Education with a research on Psycholinguistics. Working since 1997 in the Nuestra Señora del Rosario School(Albacete). Tutor, and English specialist(1997-2007) and since 2007 specialist in therapeutic pedagogy. He coordinates in his school the international Erasmus program since 2013, coordinating projects with several schools in different European countries, developing bilingual projects for school education within the frame of the Erasmus+ Program.

Currently working as associated professor at the Faculty of Education in Albacete, in the University of Castilla-La Mancha, where he teaches English Didactics, as well as Curriculum Fundamentals for the subject of English. He has been visiting professor at the Notre Dame University-Louaize, in Lebanon and at the University of Bologna, in Italy. He has taken part in researches related to the emergence of autobiographical memory and its relationship to language. His research interests focus on Educational Psychology, Psycholinguistics and International Education.