LANGUAGE -THINKING

Language underlies and binds education. Educational and linguistic phenomena occur simultaneously. There is no educational well-being without students' linguistic well-being. And yet, the omnipresence of language across the educational board is still underestimated, similarly to its significance for the educational (as well as professional) success. Its continuing neglect as the key “player” in education is not only against what we know today about how humans and their language(s) operate, but it is against common sense, too, as there is no other similar platform serving all disciplines and subjects. Let's change this situation together by developing language-dominated practices, solutions, policies, systems.
